INVESTMENT OBJECTIVES DEFINITIONS

Conservation:

Reflects your desire to seek very low risk and minimize potential loss of principal. You may seek income from your investments while understanding that returns may not keep pace with inflation. You may also intend to invest over a short period of time.

Moderate:

Reflects your desire to seek lower risk and less fluctuation in your portfolio, while striving to achieve more stable returns or income from your investments. You may also intend to invest over a short period of time.

Moderate Growth:

Reflects your desire to seek growth in your portfolio by typically using a balance of growth and conservative investment types. It may also mean that you are moderately tolerant of risk and plan to invest for a medium to long period of time.

Growth:

Reflects your desire to seek the potential for investment growth, as well as your tolerance for more significant market fluctuations and risk of loss. It may also mean that you plan to invest over a long period of time.

Aggressive Growth:

Reflects your desire for potentially substantial investment growth, as well as your tolerance for large market fluctuations and increased risk of loss. It may also mean that you plan to invest over a long period of time.

OPTIONS OBJECTIVES DEFINITIONS

Growth:

Investors are seeking the potential for investment growth and have a tolerance for more significant market fluctuations and risk of loss.

Speculation:

Investors are seeking short-term market gains that generally have above average, maximum risk, but offer the potential for short-term, maximum gains. These strategies also have the potential for significant losses and investors understand they could lose most, or all, of the money they have invested

Income:

Investors are seeking income with a modest degree of risk. These investors are typically willing to accept lower potential returns in exchange for lower risk and volatility, and understand their returns may not keep pace with inflation.

Conservation of Capital:

Investors are seeking to avoid risk and minimize potential loss of principal.
